Market & Portfolio Commentary

The highlight event for December was the passing of the US tax bill, which finally got through Congress after much deliberation; the headline grabber was the cut in corporate tax from 35% to 21%, and the package comes with an estimated cost to the Treasury of $1.5tr over 10 years. Domestic data in the US continued to paint a picture of steady growth with manageable inflation, providing ammunition for the Fed to raise the official rate by 0.25% (as expected) to 1.25%-1.5%. Elsewhere, UK Consumer Price Index (CPI) rose to 3.1% year-on-year, taking it above the 3% upper band set by the UK Treasury; the Monetary Policy Committee (MPC) however elected to keep rates unchanged, suggesting most of the inflation jump came from non-demand driven sources such as food and clothing. European economic activity remained buoyant with most EU nations maintaining the strong momentum into year end.

Markets generally trod water in December with little change to US and German sovereign debt yields. The Fund's GBP allocation contributed strongly to this month's return, as did the exposure to Argentina and Greece. The holding in the local Indian market also did well. A new, attractively priced subordinated bond by Brazilian bank Itau was bought. In response to the US tax deal, the Fund's duration was reduced through purchases of put options on Treasuries. As we enter 2018, the dominant themes should be continued; US and Eurozone economic growth with relatively tame inflation – an environment that should underpin most forms of credit.
